Special Report: Asian Carp Surveys Intensify

CHICAGO- The Asian Carp Regional Coordinating Committee (ACRCC) on October 9th announced intensive monitoring action will begin in the North Shore Channel of the Chicago River on Tuesday, October 16th, after three consecutive rounds of Environmental DNA (eDNA) sampling yielded positive results for Asian carp DNA in the North Shore Channel. Illinois DNR Aquatic Nuisance species coordinator Vic Santucci advised members of the Barrier Safety committee on October 10 that the response group will implement scheduled plans for intensive monitoring. Those plans call for a Level 1 response after three consecutive rounds of positive eDNA results in one area. Three separate eDNA samples sets were taken at the North Shore Channel between June 11th and September 11th, revealing 17 positives for silver carp DNA out of 171 samples.

Biologists from the Illinois DNR, USFWS and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be on the water with contracted commercial fishermen beginning Tuesday October 16th through Friday, October 19th. The crews will lay various net types throughout the North Shore Channel and in channel areas of the Chicago River. Agency electrofishing boats will sample fish in shoreline areas and will be used to drive fish towards the nets. Gears will be attended at all times and commercial and private vessel traffic will be able to proceed with minimal interference. A notice to mariners will be broadcast by the U.S. Coast Guard to further inform any water traffic during this effort, and daily updates will be posted on the ACRCC website <http://asiancarp.us>.

As an extra precaution, the ACRCC also will conduct intensive monitoring in a six-mile stretch of the Chicago River beginning near the Chicago lock, after one set of samples tested positive for eDNA in that area. While the North Shore Channel is regularly monitored for the presence of Asian carp, the level 1 response intensifies efforts with additional commercial fishing crews, agency electrofishing boats, and additional deep water sampling gear during an intensive four-day fishing period.

"While the science still does not tell us whether eDNA is from a live fish, a dead fish, or another source, finding three consecutive sets of positive samples triggers us to use significant resources to determine whether any Asian carp are present," said John Goss, Asian Carp Director at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. "This is part of the ACRCC's comprehensive Asian carp control strategy that includes continuing aggressive monitoring to keep Asian carp out of the Great Lakes, developing cutting edge control technologies, and refining the use of eDNA."

"The Army Corps are conducting studies on the variability of eDNA seeking to determine what the bottom line source is" responded Santucci to a query by the GLSFC

MI DNR Collecting Salmon Eggs

Michigan DNR is gathering the necessary eggs for the continued production of hatchery fish to support Michigan's world-class fisheries. Fall egg takes are under way for wild Chinook and coho salmon and for captive broodstocks of brown, rainbow, brook and lake trout.

Chinook salmon eggs were collected at the Little Manistee River Weir through October 10. Coho salmon eggs will be collected at the Platte River State Fish Hatchery Weir October 15-23.

Michigan contributes to the collaborative efforts of neighboring states to support the Great Lakes fishery. Of the Chinook salmon eggs collected, 3 million will be used in Michigan while 600,000 will go to Indiana and 850,000 to Wisconsin. Of the coho salmon eggs collected, 2.8 million will be used in Michigan while 1.2 million will go to Indiana, 850,000 to Illinois and 600,000 to Wisconsin.

Captive broodstock egg takes for brook and lake trout are in progress until mid-November at the Marquette State Fish Hatchery. Similarly at the Oden State Fish Hatchery, egg takes for brown trout have just started and will continue until mid-November. That will be followed by rainbow trout starting in late December and continuing to early February, also at Oden. All of the captive egg takes occur on an approximately biweekly schedule.

Captive broodstocks will provide 250,000 brook trout eggs, 300,000 lake trout eggs, 1.8 million brown trout eggs and 1 million rainbow trout eggs. An additional 650,000 splake eggs (brook trout and lake trout hybrid) will also be collected to support Michigan's fisheries management objectives.

The public is welcome to observe the egg takes. Call ahead to get the final egg take schedule and to ensure the collection efforts will occur.
